Turnkey solutions for benefit plans

Does Compliance Really Matter?

Yes…it's the law. There are many requirements an employer has as a plan administrator, the most important being fiduciary oversight. Plan documents, ERISA notices and ERISA disclosures are just a few of the necessary items required. Any participant can sue the plan for noncompliance with ERISA, which can lead to fines and damaged employee relations. In addition, more and more lawsuits are being brought over claim denials and benefit reductions. These lawsuits often hinge on a compliance issue, whether it is documentation, eligibility, or a plan notice or disclosure. That's why you need a consistent, organized and reliable process in place to ensure your plan is in compliance with the law..
